Replace paragraph 1 on page 3, lines 2-8 as follows:

Electronic calendar systems are a widely used resource in today's society. Electronic calendar systems contain information about events, such as what the event is, when the event will occur, and where it will occur. Attributes about the owner of a calendar, where the owner may be a person, a community organization, or business, are contained in the calendaring systems. Attributes describe the owner and the owner's preferences. Use of calendar systems help an owner manage their time, provide reminders to the owner, and allow an owner to summarize events that occurred on a specified date.
